ABOUT DALLC

The mission of the Department of Asian Languages, Literatures, and Cultures (DALLC) is to produce “global citizens” who will be able to make contributions in different sectors of society in a globalized and diverse world with multilingual abilities, intercultural communicative competence, and multicultural leadership skills. Graduates of our department will not only achieve proficiency in at least one Asian language but also become competent in intercultural communication. They will develop interpretive and analytical skills using both primary texts and secondary sources and become familiar with the textual and cultural traditions in Asia. All DALLC faculty, Language Fellows, and Teaching Associates are members of the Center for Global Languages, Literatures, and Cultures. Our department offers three majors: Chinese, Japanese, and East Asian Languages and Cultures. All DALLC students are strongly encouraged to study abroad in a reputable program in a region where the target language is used. Up to four study-away course credits (including summer program credits) can be transferred to count toward the major.
